

Interprofessional Student Workshop: Assessment of Children with Neurodevelopmental Disabilities

Tuesday, February 18, 2025 | 6-8 PM (CT)

The Vanderbilt Consortium LEND (VCL) will offer an interprofessional session for students interested in neurodevelopmental disabilities (NDD). In the session VCL faculty and long-term trainees will discuss interprofessional roles, assessment, and service provision. The goal is to teach students how various professionals in health care, education, and public health collaborate for optimal outcomes in children with NDD. The session fosters dialogue among students from different professions while modeling an interprofessional approach to the care of individuals with NDD. Supports for the family consistent with principles of family-centered care will be emphasized. The learning formats include large group and small group discussions. Dinner provided at 5:30 PM. No cost to attend.

Vanderbilt Consortium LEND:

The Vanderbilt Consortium Leadership Education in Neurodevelopmental Disabilities (LEND) program prepares graduate and post-graduate students from multiple professions to improve the health of infants, children and adolescents with disabilities. The national network of LEND programs achieves this goal by providing training in interprofessional services, cultural perspectives, research, policy, advocacy, leadership, collaboration, and family-centered, community-coordinated care. The trans-institutional training program includes faculty and trainees from Belmont University, East Tennessee State University, Meharry Medical College, Milligan College, Tennessee State University, University of Tennessee, Vanderbilt University, and Vanderbilt University Medical Center, as well as affiliates from Family Voices of Tennessee.
